In the past when we would walk the streets
Tapestries of red beneath our feet
Laughing friends can all sit on the lawn
Thinking about it all
And its long gone
Its long gone

In the past when we would hear the sounds
Thinking we can all fly off the ground
Dreams of her reflected in the pond
Fading ripples haunt
And its long gone

I didn't know it back then but you were a gift
Sent from heaven above, can't believe I missed
Days would pass, ignored the growing rift
I could see, tried to bury the pit

Crossroads

Driving past the streets where we found meaning
Where you and I rode our bikes into the evening
Screamed our lungs out in the pouring rain
The ecstasy of youth running through our veins

I've been meaning to talk and let you know
Right before I start my journey across the globe
All my life I've been stuck in the same place
There comes a time where you leave it behind and chase

Your dreams
Your dreams

Its been years, still wake up covered in my own sweat
Living life, but I still have my regrets
When I close my eyes the image in my head
Your hazel gaze, I still see you staring back

I made a decision at the crossroads by the mall
One path led to glory, and the other to my downfall
Since I was young, had the dream to explore the globe
My one regret was choosing to do it alone
